

Quad-Bike Conversion Workshop

Electric Vehicles New England (EVNE), which is the New England branch of the AEVA held the first session of their series of quad-bike conversion workshops last month on the 12th of December.

Sunday's session focused on torque, power requirements for determining motor size and battery requirements, and the differences between AC and DC motors. The session ended with an examination of the donor quad and discussion of where to place the motor and batteries. Although the focus is on quad-bike conversions a Nissan Navara was also examined. If you have a vehicle you are interested in converting please bring it along to discuss during the workshop.

All are invited to attend the next session with the only cost being a small donation for refreshments. For more information on the next session please contact Christie on 6772 7821 or email secretary@evne.info
